IN FOCUS: Global and Regional Synergy for COVID-19 Response

Since the declaration of the novel coronavirus as a public health emergency of international concern, the World Health Organization (WHO) and other global and regional bodies have worked closely with Nigeria to prevent, detect, and respond to COVID-19. Measures put in place through this synergy helped curb the spread of the disease and provide critical care to those infected. With the emergence of new variants and concurrent infectious disease outbreaks including cholera, there is a need for sustained global and regional efforts to respond to COVID-19 in Nigeria.

In line with this, the WHO African Region (WHO AFRO) is piloting the Strengthening and Utilizing Response Groups for Emergencies (SURGE). SURGE is one of three flagship projects led by the WHOAFRO Member States, including Nigeria, focusing on strengthening preparedness, detection, and response to public health emergencies in the African region.

Recently, a stakeholder engagement meeting involving the Nigeria Centre for Disease Control and Prevention (NCDC) and the Federal Ministry of Health (FMOH) was conducted by WHO AFRO. The meeting highlighted the importance of regional coordination of response activities for health security strengthening.

NCDC continues to work with regional institutions and partners across all levels to strengthen the localised response to COVID-19, leveraging best practices, global strategies such as the COVID-19 Strategic Preparedness and Response Plan 2022 and lessons learned using a One Health approach.

We commend the efforts of global and regional bodies for their role in delivering rapid and comprehensive support to countries and communities as they prepare for, respond to, and recover from public health emergencies. These partnerships have provided access to lifesaving care, supported overwhelmed health systems, and mitigated economic hardship during the COVID-19 pandemic.
